HYDE SCHOOL OPENS THIS MORNING — These are a portion of the 40 youngsters who began classes at the Hyde school this morning. The shot was taken in the library during a break in the opening morning testing schedule. The summer program will run for eight weeks. The school will then require the full for the fall year.

Hyde School Starts Summer Session

Forty-two boys ranging in age from 13 through 18 began preliminary testing this morning in preparation for eight weeks of summer school at the new Hyde School opened its doors in the Bathington City.

The opening of the school brings to fruition the efforts of the city's educational planning committee, which began initial efforts for the school last fall.

The 40 boys enrolled in the initial summer program will be divided into two groups. The first group, ages 13 through 16, will be assigned to the first grade, while the second group, ages 17 and 18, will be assigned to the second grade.

Ohio, Massachusetts provides the largest number of students. Hyde is located in Bath, Maine, about 10 miles from the city of Portland.

Headmaster Joseph H. Gould, who has been at Hyde for 10 years, said that the school's purpose is to provide a challenging educational environment for students who are academically gifted.

The summer session operates on an irregular basis, according to Gould. Each student is assigned to a specific class, whether it is an eighth grade or an eleventh grade.

Gould reports that there is an equality of students in the school. He said that the school is not a "prep school" and that it is open to all students who are academically gifted.

That they have in common, however, the headmaster reports, is a sense of achievement. He said that the school's purpose is to provide a challenging educational environment for students who are academically gifted.

Senator Dodd Testifies On Errand Boy Charge

By JOHN CHADWICK
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Thomas J. Dodd told the Senate Ethics Committee today that he did not bring up the charge of an errand boy in the 1964 trip to Germany.

Dodd, a Democrat, said he had no recollection of the charge.

The white-haired senator was asked as a witness in a crowded hearing room shortly after his wife had testified briefly and after Senator Dodd had asked that the committee's chief counsel, Sen. William F. Buckley Jr., be disqualified.

"I seem clear that Sen. Dodd did not recall any," Dodd replied.

Smoking Linked To Emphysema

By ROBERT GOLDENSTEIN
CHICAGO (AP) — Emphysema, a lung disease with a death rate increasing faster than that of any other single disease, has been produced experimentally in cigarette-smoking dogs, a medical research team reported today.

All the smoking animals died of emphysema within a year, the dogs inhaled cigarette smoke for 10 hours a day, five days a week, for 10 months.

Viet Cong View Conflict as 'American War'

By FRED B. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON (AP) — A United States survey of popular attitudes in government-controlled areas of South Vietnam indicates that the war is viewed as an American war, officials report.

U.S. experts who conducted the survey say there also is a tendency to view the war as a struggle to bring back peace and full freedom to South Vietnam's economic and political life.

There seems to be a growing feeling in popular confidence in the ability of the Saigon government to handle the war.

News in Brief:

Democrats Splitting on War

THIRTY — A number of New Jersey Democrats, alarmed by an apparent growing, grassroots dissatisfaction in the state with President Johnson's Vietnam policy, are seriously considering breaking with the President on Vietnam in the fall election.

One of the Democrats' party's most influential state leaders, Sen. Frank Lautenberg, said he would not support the President's Vietnam policy.
